

The Tenting & Ripblock Collection

The Ripblock material was originally designed for use in tents. Over time, the fabric has also been used successfully for other applications such as seating for game viewing vehicles, bags, drop down lapa (veranda) blinds and outdoor furniture covers.

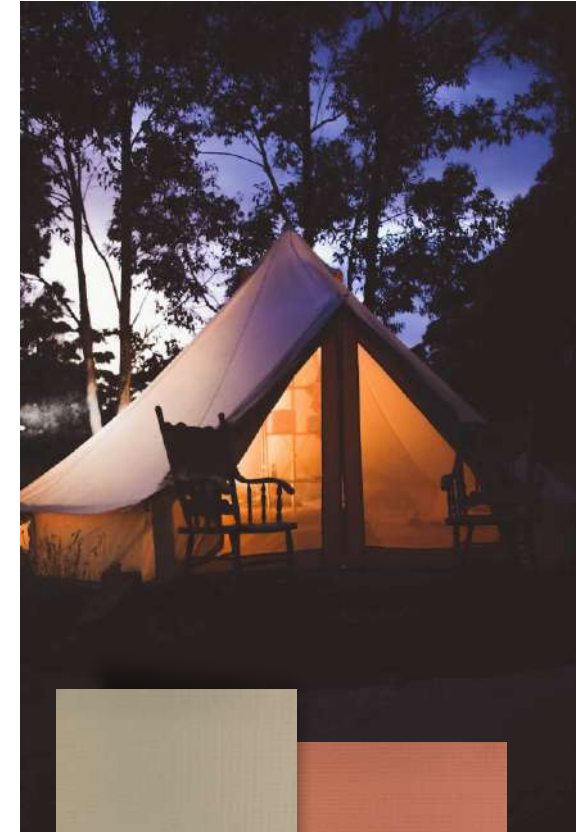

The base fabric for Cedarbrook's Ripblock material is generally 100% polyester and is woven in a rip construction to increase the fabric strength and is impregnated with an acrylic based chemical. The fabric is water proof, rot proof and as standard feature, we apply a fluorocarbon as a post treatment which makes the fabric water repellent in addition to being water proof.

The fluorocarbon treatment is an important feature, as it does not allow the fabric to wet out, where the water is expelled off the cloth quickly, which then allows the fabric to dry quickly. With the water being expelled off the cloth quickly, this assists in the fabric not leaking and when the fabric does not wet out, this also assists in the prevention of mould / mildew.

If the Ripblock material is being used in permanent structures (Lodge tents), we recommend that the fabric is cleaned regularly to remove leaves, bird droppings and general dirt. This prevents the growth of mould / mildew on the fabric and will extend the material's longevity.

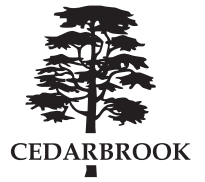

Please ensure that products manufactured with the Ripblock material are completely dry before packing away, as this will avoid mould and mildew forming on the fabric.

We supply the Ripblock material in two widths - 180cm wide and 240cm wide, and offer a wide range of colours and weights which we manufacture to stock.
